

Familial Hypercholesterolaemia (FH) in Primary Health Care: Information for General Practitioners regarding a new regional public awareness campaign for FH

This information session will present an accessible overview of FH and how to identify and manage it in general practice. It will address previously identified GP knowledge gaps on FH and outline the resources available to South West GPs to identify and manage their own patients with this condition. Importantly it will address the issue of how to manage family members of affected individuals who have yet to be diagnosed.

This campaign has been created from the findings of a collaborative research project with:
